Outfielder Goslin Draws a Suspension: Baker Battling for Third-Base Job With Yankees

PLAYER ON WHOM MUCH DEPENDS BREAKS RULES

BY DENMAN THOMPSON.

TAMPA, Fla., March 10.-A bombshell was exploded in the camp of the Nationals today, when Leon Goslin was suspended for failure to observe training rules. Goslin received notice of his suspension, signed by both President Griffith and Manager Milan, and he watched today's practice session in civilian clothes from the side lines. The term of his suspension was not specified. Goslin, who admits the truth of the charges against him, is very much cut up over the fate which has befallen him. He plans to ask for reinstatement on a promise to be good. Neither President Griffith nor Manager Milan had indicated whether Goslin's plea will be given consideration.

AMPA, Fla., March 10.-There is more than a possibility that Leon Goslin, slated for a regular job as picket man for the Nationals in his first year as a major leaguer, may earn the additional distinction of being placed in the middle pasture instead of right field, to which, by common consent, he has been assigned in the pre-season calculations. There is little doubt but that if fielding skill alone was essential, without regard for experience of batting prowess, Eddie Goebel would get the nomination, for in pure speed and defensive ability he probably is the peer of any fly chaser on the roster, but Goslin having the call because of his hitting power, it becomes a question whether Goose also wouldn't prove more effective in center field because of his wonderful arm, than the present incumbent, Rice last year having been woefully deficient in paratively weak.

Rice Believes Arm Stronger.

Rice asserts he has never been able to throw from the outlield without incurring pain, but he took a course of treatments during the past winter and says his arm feels so good now that he believes the aliment has been overcome. If Sam experiences trouble with his wing again this season, however, there is little question but that shifting him to right field will be considered. In that event Goslin will be the heir apparent to the job in center, as Milan will be a fixture in left, unless his leg caves in, as it did at one time last year. It would prove ruinous to transfer Goslin to left field, where his batting and general efficiency probably would be greatly impaired by having the sun to contend with.

Whether a change will be seriously contemplated depends, of course, on the condition of Rice's arm this year. If he shows improvement over his throwing form of last season he will be unmolested in the bosition. Otherwise for the general welfare of the team a shift may be considered necessary, in which event Goslin will be the logical candidate, provided his performances justify the optimistic estimate of his capabilities already formed.

Goslin still has a lot to learn about cosin still has a lot to learn about playing the outfield. He has been in professional base ball only two years and for a part of that period his work was confined entirely to pitching. He is an intelligent chap, however, and has proved such an apt pupil there is little doubt he will pick up the fine points of his duties rapidly.

Most Chances in Center.

Clark Griffith always has contented that ability to throw well is a prime requisite for any outfielder, but particularly for the player stationed in right, who has so many chances to prevent a runner on first from advancing more than one base on a safety into that sector. There is slittle doubt that in the course of a season, however, a centerfielder who can get 'em to either side of his spacious territory will have many more chances for throws than either a left or right fielder, so it would seem logical to place the player with the most effective whip in the middle pasture, especially as the heaves required of him are in the main longer than those necessary from the other than those necessary from the other than those necessary from the other than the salary is between the contract of the con pasture, especially as the heaves required of him are in the main longer than those necessary from the other two gardens.

While on the subject of outfielders it should be recorded that Milan himself appears to be in better physical condition than for many seasons past. The manager, who says he has not felt so well for several years, both looks and acts it, and he believes he can avoid the trouble with his leg that put him on the shelf on several occasions during the 1921 campaign. He has assigned himself to the post in left field, but only tentatively, for the new pilot asserts that if any one proves better qualified for the job, or if he again is afflicted with a charley horse he will yank himself from the line-up instantly. Fans who saw the unhesitating manner in which he dealt with wabbling pitchers during his brief tenure as director last summer will feel confident Zeb means what he says.

All Players on Hand.

All Players on Hand. All Players on Hand.

There were no absentees from yesterday's drill at Plant Field, Zachary having recovered from the heavy cold that kept him on the side lines the day before. The weather also was more propitious, there being no high wind to contend with, and as a result the athletes got in as beneficial a work-out as any yet staged.

The feature of the session was the tutoring given Miller, Phillips and Gleason in the art of pitching with Goslin has a wing as strong and supple as tempered steel, and can heave a ball from great distances with remarkable accuracy, while Rice not only is handicapped by a notable lack of sureness on ground balls and the fact that he has to take a pitcher's wind-up to throw, involving the loss of several precious seconds, but he is unable to attain much distance, owing to the fact that his arm is comparatively weak.

BY JOHN B. FOSTER.

The Pittsburgh Nationals have established an entirely new record—a family one. The Smoky City has three pairs of brothers on its team. "We could only beat that by making 'em jwins or four pairs," said Barney Dreyfuss proudly. For this is the first time that three pairs of brothers have played on the same big lengue club at the same time.

First come the Bigbees, Carson and Lyle. The former has been an outfielder with the Pirates for some time, and the latter is a pitcher, who perhaps may need another year's seasoning on the coast.

Then there are the Morrisons, John and Phil, pitchers both of them, both ex-Army men, and both too good to pass by with just favorable mention.

The third pair, recently snagged by Dreyfuss, are the brothers Rohwer. One of them, Ray, was with the Pirates last season. Once or twice he slipped in as a piuch hitter. The other was at the University of California. His name is
